

Social Economy in Poland: definitions, application, expectations and uncertainties

Kuba Wygnański with support from Piotr Frączak

Content

1. Distinguishing features of the social economy in relation to other sectors 4

1.1. Main perspectives on social economy 4

1.2. The social and the market dimensions of social economy 6

1.2.1. The market as a starting point 6

1.2.2. Interdependence between sectors: differences, borders, common areas, interchangeability of roles 7

2. Territory of social economy 9

2.1. “Three steps” – the process of gradually demarcating the area of social economy in Poland 9

2.2. Step one – indicating the areas outside the scope of our interest in this Report 9

2.2.1. Formal market correction institutions 9

2.2.2. Informal economy (the so-called Fourth Sector) 11

2.3. Step two – social economy in a broad sense: the so-called Third System 12

2.3.1. The Third System: its components 12

2.3.2. The Third System – defining it as a conjunction of the Third Sector and the old social economy 13

2.4. Step three – social entrepreneurship as the “core of social economy” 17

2.4.1. Identification of social economy enterprises (SEE) 17

3. Territory of social economy enterprises 19

3.1. The most important issue – SEE competence as a means to reclaim independence and empowerment

by people, institutions or communities 19

3.2. Basic criteria and characteristics of the social economy 20

3.2.1. Economic criteria 20

3.2.2. Social criteria 21

3.3. How social enterprises are created? 23

3.3.1. SEE as a mechanism of “economisation” of the Third Sector 23

3.3.2. SEE as a means to overcome deficits of the old social economy 23

3.3.3. Social economy institutions created totally anew 24

3.4. Application of the criteria in Poland 26

4. Inspirations – social economy and social entrepreneurship in Europe 27

4.1. The scope of social economy and social entrepreneurship in the EU 27

4.2. The diverse activities of SEE in the EU 27

4.3. Social entrepreneurship as a result of the welfare state crisis in Europe 28

4.4. “Institutional creation” of SEE in the EU 29

4.5. Main institutional “incarnations” of SEE in Europe 30

4.5.1. Basic types of activities 30

5. Instead of a conclusion – the future of the social economy in Poland: main challenges 31

5.1. Terminological problems – the need for definition and self-definition of the social economy 31

5.2. The Need for a specific identity of the social economy in Poland 32

5.3. The risk of over-promotion of the social economy concept – „management of expectations” 32

5.4. Regulatory issues – what is needed, what is possible, and what is impossible 32

5.5. The need to recognise the developmental importance of a broadly construed social economy adoption by central government and policy community. 33

5.6. Inflow of funds from the EU – an opportunity to make dreams come true or a trap for the spirit of entrepreneurship? 35

5.7. The need to create a clear vision of social policy that would include the social economy 35

5.8. The question of social economy compatibility with the needs and attitudes of its potential beneficiaries 35

5.9. Acceptance or rejection of the social entrepreneurship idea within the non-profit sector 36

5.10. The role of other sectors and groups in social economy growth – the private sector 36

5.11. The danger of a chaotic development of the social economy – the need to introduce mechanisms of identification and distribution of the right models 37